

LIFE AFTER ELECTRICITY

- 1. First hours
- 2. First days
- 3. First weeks
- 4. First months
- 5. First years

Part 1

First HOURS of Life after Electricity

Spring. The light was extinguished everywhere. Reserve power has been immediately turned on in all regime, government, and dangerous objects of all countries of the world. The information about simultaneous power outage on different continents in different countries is transmitted on reserve connections. Military objectives are immediately getting prepared for the state of high alertness; all systems operate on a backup power supply counted on several days. Nuclear reactor shutdown procedure begins on Nuclear power stations, chemical plants shutdown procedure begins too; in the Metro the evacuation of people begins to the surface, airports operate on a backup power supply only for flights landing. In short, all the regime objects act in accordance with the emergency situation schedule of switching off the central power supply. The smaller and more intelligent part of the population immediately admits that this is not a temporary accident, but a complete power outage FOREVERMORE – the situation that has been lately discussed by many people a lot.

Most people are still waiting for the light to be turned on again. The phones do not work, the TVs are off, NO Internet. The main thing is that there is no water in the taps and anywhere in the city; the sewage system does not work. In the twenty millionth metropolis at least a million people want to shit every hour – and in spite of everything, they do that. Everywhere! Shit freely begins to drain from the upper floors to the heads of those living below.

Four hours later, all 20 million people want to drink in the megalopolis; there is still traffic in megalopolis, but there are already traffic jams - traffic lights do not work; there is no police – they are already busy with the fate of their families. The smartest and fastest ones are first to leave the city by car, using only petrol left in the petrol tanks, and move in the direction to their dachas and country houses. Practically all medical activity is already stopped in the first few hours - millions of children in the world are rescued from abortions, tens of thousands are not dismembered into organs for sale to transplantologists, commercial cutting of people for unnecessary operations and poisoning with chemotherapy ceases immediately. After five to ten hours without water, people begin to smash store windows and take away the drinking water and food. By the end of the first day, all the stores of megacities are scattered over millions of families. Most of the townspeople still do not leave the cities and are waiting for the turning on the desired electricity, without which they do not even imagine how to live on. By the end of the first 24 hours, the main goal of marauders and robbers is no longer money or jewelry, but drinking water. The water from the rivers flowing through the cities cannot be used as drinking water – it became pesticide poison long ago. There are no water supplies to the cities and are not expected to be. Without electricity, everything has been stopped, including all power repair services that would have to repair broken power lines - without any connection, transport and management, they have already fled to their families and solve the lack of water and food for their wives and children.

This is how the first day passes in the megacities and cities of the world after a simultaneous disabling of all main transmission lines on the continents. The government of all countries in the world is shocked to observe the collapse without the slightest opportunity to stop the natural logical development of events, because nothing works in the technogenic (manmade) world without electricity.

Part 2

First DAYS of Life after Electricity

After spending the night in the dark apartments without water and johns (toilets), the overwhelming majority starts to get prepared for leaving the cities. One of the rooms in all apartments is already hopelessly contaminated - stench is unbearable everywhere, sewage has been already poured out of the windows for 24 hours. People begin to take with the most necessary things and go to get acquainted with the neighbors of the same building block in order to get out of the city not alone, but in a group. Since morning streets of cities of the world are getting filled with streams of people, squeezing with children and carriages through the already abandoned cars. The distance from the centre to the exit of megacities is about 20 km on foot, in towns it is about 2-3 kilometers. This is not a problem for any families, even for those in patients in wheelchairs – it takes the daylight of one spring day to reach the countryside. Families of well known oligarchs and officials are wandering together with the lumpenproletariat (working class) and the plankton (office workers). All the banks and all their money have disappeared without electricity, and therefore they became poor because all the money was electronic. Drivers, lackeys and guards disappeared together with electricity. It is especially hard for the rich: everyone is thirsty, and nothing can be done with it - they go along with all others.

The sun is shining, thousands and thousands of people (suddenly united by one big problem) feel cheerful, having conversations and reciting nursery rhymes - they are moving towards a new life. Outside the city there are bonfires everywhere, resting stops for having a rest, discussions about what to do; those who have cut off electricity are criticized and abused; forgotten living communication is everywhere, acquaintances and first falling in love in tents, choosing the strongest and most determined people as seniors for each group; the leaders have already begun to show themselves during the first day of exodus. The first contacts are being made among the leaders of the groups, first conflicts appear – to find out who is the strongest. But in every conflict no one crosses the line - people have a huge number of loaded hunting weapon.

On military objectives of the countries everything is on a staff basis: generators are working, there is a connection with the headquarters and Government regulatory authorities. But the psychological tension of the personnel is growing because there is no information about where the families of servicemen are and what is going on with them. There are both electricity and water on warships. On submarines too. Missile installations are predominantly in the forests and in the mountains - everything is in order with water, food and johns (toilets). But there is the fuel supply left in generators only for one day (24 hours). The submarines have a long term supply, and missile installations have fuel supply only for a few days. Full power outage has drastically decreased the motivation for missile attacks or air strikes. There is no electricity in any country of the world, governments are not busy with international disputes any longer. In all countries, there are chaos and total intractability. Attempts to repair the main transmission lines are hopeless - neither repair services nor the provision of their work are no longer to be found; without electricity, any equipment is out of use; nothing works, no one will be found for a very long time. And the reserve of power supply is running low already in every place. Everything is shining and spinning only in the places where the generator are filled in with more diesel, but only there; there are no power transmission lines any longer and electricity cannot be transmitted nowhere.

And at this time in each direction of the main power transmission lines, unknown raiders, not confining themselves to the insulators broken up the day before, are heaping up several supports of telegraph poles - this is the final clean shot to the electrification head of the planet. And now any repairing of power transmission lines without electricity and transport is impossible at all.

This is how this day is passing. Many have already reached their dachas and country houses, lighted the stoves and are making tea. Others have halted, still it is far to their houses and dachas. Those, who have no place to go, join the happy owners of houses and wells and promise to serve them and protect their new owners for food and water. Men have shared night watch among themselves with hunting rifles loaded with canister in order to protect from looters and robbers. But those are very few. After all, the commission of any crime from that day became deadly dangerous. There are no more police and courts that will protect or help the offender to escape from the punishment. Now canister shot in the chest is the only thing that awaits a robber or rapist at the slightest aggression. Now the people's right for self-defense is complete and unlimited.

The indisputable credibility goes to armed military units, which are leaving the cities, marching in a disciplined order. Their order is the law for everyone. They are surely given a part of the water and food. In return, full protection and inviolability. Power is not just power, but it becomes the absolute power; and already without any ugly substitutes invented by parliaments of absurd legislation. The only thing that the government cannot do is to quickly repair electricity without electricity. The repair infrastructure is completely hopeless. And it is practically irrecoverable.

In the evening of the third day without electricity, there are not even any robbers and looters in megacities. Because looters are thirsty too, and in depleted technogenic (manmade) cities there is no drinking water and cannot be.

Part 3

First WEEKS of Life after Electricity

There is a widespread division of the land by millions of newly-made peasants with the land stones marking in order to show the borders of land possession. There are no cadastre, computers and other shit anymore. The land is taken by everyone who can work it right now, during this season. Everyone understands that surviving the coming winter depends on the harvest of what will be grown during the coming summer and autumn. Cattle of all kinds is getting increased in unheard value. No one slaughters it – it is only for breeding. Horses are of special value and price. There are almost no horses. But those, which can be found, are to be immediately commandeered by Military Armed units. There is a benefit: still a lot of diesel and gasoline in different storage facilities; and, using tractors, everyone ploughs in this last tractor season. Around the cities almost everything is being ploughed up. People sow indiscriminately all the seeds that they find. Those who do not have the access to the tractor dig with a spade as much area for kitchen garden as they can. Each day and every hour is dedicated to preparing for the coming winter which makes every former citizen feel horrible while getting used to the new unusual working life. The days are still long, communication between neighbors is being established, people are exchanging tools for the labor of the former planktons (former office workers) which have nothing at all. The extraordinarily high sex offer from the millions of whore-students and whore-secretaries; but there is practically no demand for them: they are thin, ragged, and unwashed; and they have to get involved in a hard black unskilled job.

The military is trying to repair the power transmission lines, but this is completely impossible: all the components are scattered over the already abandoned warehouses where there is no special connection; there are no factories for the dumped towers parts production -they have shut down and have already been depopulated; and the most important thing is that the nuclear power stations have been shut down in an emergency order of full power outage in the world, and there are already no people there - the system has completely collapsed. Attempts to repair are not considered at all.

Countless disputes and conflicts lead to a widespread spontaneous election of local judges, and the sentences without the possibility of appealing them. The court is fast and fair - all in front of people. A bribe is deadly dangerous and almost impossible. Society turns into the society of judges. The vertical of submission is built through the closest military groups and further to the governmental bodies in the center of the capitals.

The very possibility of a nuclear conflict between the countries has completely disappeared. Just because there are no targets for missile and air strikes: there are no megacities and industrial objectives in any country of the world - simply no targets for missile and air strikes any longer. Governments of different countries are still using special communication to solve the problems of submarines with nuclear weapons on board. The commanders of submarines receive orders to unload nuclear warheads on deserted coasts and how to hide them. And thereafter to return to the ports of registration and release the crews ashore. Military missile defense units are still carrying combat duty, but there are already detachments to prevent personnel from dispersing. Backup power is almost depleted. The supply of diesel fuel for generators sometimes occurs, but this is already perceived as a miracle. There is no connection, with the exception of governmental bodies and central staffs. Barrier troops also show unreliability, and the cases of leaving the alert and the absence of new shifts are getting increased more and more.

Almost all the colonies have already been left by the guards, and the prisoners are free to move in different directions.

Gangs appear: those attack settlers. The only goal is food. Bandits are destroyed by both military units and any armed Heads of families on place without trial and investigation. Most of those who have unexpectedly found freedom find their places as farm laborers in the owners' houses, land plots and peasant farms; many prefer free gathering and harvesting of mushrooms and berries, herbs and roots.

There are practically no injuries caused by car accidents, at factories, in megacities. And those that happen are treated with improvised means – using splints (like wooden pieces) for support of the broken limbs, treating the wounds with clay and fleaworts. Doctors from the medicine of paracelsus inevitably become the doctors of Galen's medicine and begin to use herbs, roots, tinctures, fresh milk, etc. Anesthesia replaces a glass of moonshine (home made alcohol) and a hard-fixed body for emergency amputations and operations - at the level of surgery before the First World War inclusively.

Gradually the general atmosphere becomes calmer, people do not have time for worrying - everyone is busy with work from morning till night. There is a visible awaking of millions of former TV viewers and the Internet addicted. All gradually come to their senses and begin to understand what happened to humanity for the last century. This is still a barely noticeable recovery of the brain and consciousness, but these signs have already appeared. The best of all is for the former urban kids: they do not suspect about the problems of parents, playing in the fields, catching butterflies and are completely safe because now their children's bodies are not needed by anyone - without electricity there is no transplantology.

Part 4

First MONTHS of Life after Electricity

It is already the second month. Everywhere gentle seedlings of green colour appear in the recently sown fields. There is a little amount of cattle, and it is guarded by whole groups of fully armed men. Now the cattle is of the greatest value – nothing is worth more. There is no money use, electronic money disappeared on the first day of full power outage - nobody needs cut paper. Judges, security officials and central authorities promise the prompt entry of gold and silver money, but so far the craftsmen have just begun to establish a manual coinage of coins, and this is not an easy task. Commodity exchange is everywhere. Products, flint, simple agricultural tools, building materials and equipment, cartridges, warm clothes, shoes of all kinds, diesel and gasoline, chacha and moonshine (home made alcohol) are in great demand. Families with strong and courageous men feel the best. It is the worst of all for those who are without men or with weak and cowardly men. All the pederasts were killed in the first month, immediately after the disappearing of police which defended pederasts before. A rigid power vertical is getting formed, the chaos is over. The order is very rigid. No zones. There are few penalties: either public flogging or the death penalty by hanging – bullets are expensive. Thieves are punished by cutting hands or shot dead by the owners on the spot.

There are still some stocks of fuel left. Only security forces go by cars and ride. All others move around on foot. The relations between parents and children, brothers and sisters (dispersed by thousands of kilometers) are broken off. It becomes obvious that everyone will not meet many forever. The problem of diaspora exists and awaits its solution. Different nationalities with a population of hundreds of thousands and millions of people arrange their compact independent government and control already huge territories. They have many children and hard working women. Almost all their men are combat-ready and armed. Already in the second and third generation they consider different lands as their homeland. The option of the coming of the masses of Asians and Africans back to their ancestral lands is not even considered, it is impossible. The central authority of different countries with the remaining disciplined military forces delays the solution of the problem of the diaspora's power borders, and thereby increasingly aggravates it. Autumn is coming. Almost all have already decided on housing and work, with who and how to spend the winter. The crops are not that very large, but the harvesting is done by hands, and every spikelet and every fruit are harvested. The harvest is poured into numerous hangars and warehouses that are no longer suitable for anything else. Over the summer, almost all mushrooms and berries are swept and harvested. This is the first year when bees have given a wonderful harvest of honey since many decades, and the bees do not die any longer. Fear of spending the first winter has resulted in the great amount of products prepared for the winter. After harvesting, the mood of millions of people has become close to the jubilant one - the peoples of the world have seen that nothing terrible had happened: it is possible to live without electricity; and the number of problems has obviously decreased and the health is getting better, and not otherwise. It is noticeable that almost all women of childbearing age are pregnant - what is not surprising, because there are almost no candles, people go to bed right after sunset; and millions of abortions without electricity is impossible, and the children are now in great demand both for parents and for the state. In February and March, at the end of a difficult and unusual winter, all countries of the world are filled with crib talk of newborn babies. Weak babies die at once, but the birth rate is off the scale; and on the national scale the percentage of infant mortality is almost invisible.

Over the past months, the great majority of people have turned to God in one way or another, but in the way they have never turned to God before. The society was confidently and quickly divided into three classes: the military, the Clergy and peasants. Moreover, the military and the Clergy are under one and a half percent (1.5 %) of the total population. And therefore, it is not difficult for new peasants to feed keep them. The first attempts to gather the tribute were made – but tribute gathering without coins is uncomfortable. Everyone is getting prepared for the second crop. The necessary equipment is prepared. The military allocates the left precious fuel for ploughing, and only for ploughing. But it is already too little. They also give all the horses for ploughing. Not only women are pregnant, but all the mares are in foal. Mares are under supervisions and especially protected in order not to damage the foals. Sorcerers-scientists continue to cause confusion in the heads of the central leadership, but more and more of national security start to understand WHO IS GUILTY and WHAT TO DO. It is impossible to deceive all on a long term basis: the fraud is short term, the truth is endless. The fate of pederasts awaits for unrepentant sorcerers.

To be continued...

Glory be to Jesus Christ!
German Sterling (prose writer)